

Contents

Preface	1	Who is speaking in focus groups? The dialogical display of heterogeneity	103
1 Dialogism: interaction, social knowledge and dialogue	7	5.1 Introduction	103
1.1 Introduction	7	5.2 Positioning in dialogical dynamics	105
1.2 What kind of dialogism?	8	5.3 The heterogeneity of the speaker	108
1.3 Interaction	9	5.4 From where is one speaking?	110
1.4 Socially shared knowledge	14	5.5 The play of identification through wording: coding and slippages	115
1.5 Dialogue	24	5.6 Relations between discourses	119
2 Focus groups through the lens of dialogism	31	5.7 Other voices	122
2.1 Introduction	31	5.8 Self-dialogism	126
2.2 What are focus groups?	32	5.9 Conclusion	128
2.3 Focus groups: where is the group?	35	6 Dialogue and the circulation of ideas	131
2.4 A step back to research into small group dynamics	38	6.1 Introduction	131
2.5 Focus groups and dialogism	45	6.2 The dialogue of ideas	132
2.6 The use of analytical tools in the study of focus group: four main assumptions	48	6.3 Topic analysis: from the flow of discourse to topics and themes	135
3 Dialogical analyses of focus groups: data and analytical approaches	51	6.4 Trying out arguments and understandings: analogies and distinctions	139
3.1 Introduction	51	6.5 Analogy-distinction cycles and topical trajectories	146
3.2 Presentation of the focus-group data	52	6.6 Arguments: stories in the service of arguing a point	151
3.3 Dialogical analytical assumptions at work: a first overview	55	6.7 Metaphors, metonymies, prototypical examples and other discursive figures	154
3.4 Conclusion	66	6.8 Quotes and hypothetical quotes	157
4 Focus groups as communicative activity types	69	6.9 From themes to global patterns and underlying assumptions	159
4.1 Introduction: communicative activity types	69	6.10 Conclusion	164
4.2 Framings and activity roles in communicative activity types	71	7 Themata in dialogue: taking social knowledge as shared	167
4.3 Focus groups as communicative activity types	74	7.1 Introduction	167
4.4 Communicative activity type analysis of two kinds of focus group	79	7.2 From relational categories to concepts with 'more complex content'	168
4.5 Hybridities of framing	88	7.3 Themata underlying social representations of AIDS	176
		7.4 From trust/distrust (proto-thema, thema) to medical confidentiality (topic)	178
		7.5 Conclusion	192